Love Beyond the Stars. When that I loved a maiden
My heaven was in her eyes,
And when they bent above me
I knew no deeper alties:
But when her heart forsook me
My spirit broke its bars
For grief beyond the sunset
And leve beyond the stars.

When that I loved a malden She seemed the world to me:

Now is my soul the universe,
My dream—the sky and sea!

There bends no heaven above me,
No glory binds or bars
My grief beyond the sunset,
My love beyond the stars.

When that I loved a maiden
I worshipped where she trod;
But when she clove my heart, the cleft
Set free the imprisoned god;
Then was I king of the world;
My sent had burst its bars,
For grief beyond the sunset
And leve beyond the stars.

—London Nation,

Thanks to a Dimple. I am a plain, blunt man. To be
When making love absurdly antic
Is quite impossible for me.
Who am so very unromantic.

And keep me dumb with pretty Dolly, That I must fall upon my knees Or so some other act of folly.

But when I called on her to-day
While talking of indifferent matters
I caught a glance that, I may say,
Tore all my doubts and fears to tallers,

Her dimpling smile, just touched with My few words whispered in a hurry-And preste, lo: the deed was done With no unpleasant feas or thery.

Tis done and none the worse am I-Who would have thought the thing so

Who would have simple!

O. Fate, whatever you deny.

I thank you for that telltale dimple — Brooklyn Life.

The Lost Oration. The Lost Oration.

Seated one day in my airship
I was weary and it at ease.

As my gas-bag drifted killy
Over the waving trees;
I knew not what I was doing.
But I heaved out a sand-bag they
And it struck on a farmer's shou.

And be cussed nothing like amon.

His onths came through the twilight And punctured the evening's calm;
At handling deck-hand language
This Reulen could take the palm;
His words told of pain and sorrow,
And desire to take my life;
All because of that innocent sand-bag
He was bent upon bloody strife.

I have tried, but I try all vainly,

To arouse those sounds divine,
But I slways dump my sand-bags
On some milder fellow's spine;
It may be some other balloonist
Will hear that talk again,
And will write it on irreproof paper,
With a patent asbestos pen!

—Denver Republican.

Sonnet.

A gentleness that grows of steady faith; A joy that sheds its sunshine every-A humble strength and readiness to

Those burthens which strict duty ever lay'th

Here only grow those sweet and precious fruits
Which ripes for the soul that well

A patience which the world can neither That dares in simple usefulness to live.

And without one sad look behind to die

When that day comes"; these tell me that our love Is building for itself a home above. —James Russell Lowell.

To Age. Welcome, eld friend! These many years Have we lived door by door: The fates have laid aside their shears

When better boys were taught, But thou at length hast made me sage, If I am sage at aught.

Little I know from other men, Too little they from me. But thou hast pointed well the pen That writes these lines to thee.

Thanks for expelling fear and hope— One vile, the other vain; One's sceurge, the other's telescope— I shall not see again.

Rather what lies before my feet My notice shall engage.

He who hath bray'd youth's dizzy heat

Dreads not the frost of age.

—Walter Savage Landor.

The Cup of Life.

Of all the vintage in the world One single cup of wine, One cup of life, one cup of death, One destiny is mine. I'd not give up that special cup My fates have filled for me For any other in all time

Or all eternity. For in my time and in my place No foot has stood before:

The Blue Royand. I had a regelbush, and it died

Just at the opening of the Spring; had a bird—it flow away Before it had quite learned to sing.

They tell me, in the blue beyond
I'll find them waiting there for me—
The rose-bush full of scarlet buds,
The bird, as notice on a tree.
—Archibaid Sullivan, in Smart Set.

Strong French Porters. The porters of the central markets at Paris, which are the largest markets in the world, are called "the strong men of the markets" because of their great muscle and endurance They wear hats as big as parasols, which enable them to carry on their heads most unwieldy and unpleasant burdens, such as crates of fowls, rab bits and little pigs.

Too Sharp a Cividing Line. Elder (discussing the new minister's probation disceurse) - In my openion he wasna justified in dividing folk into the sheep and the goats. wadna just say, Jamie, that I was among the unco guid, and I wadna say that you were among the unce bad. Good Work of Electric Clock. The world's best timekeeper is said to be the electric clock in the basement of the Berlin observatory, which was installed by Prof. Forste. in 1865. It is inclosed in an air-tight glass cylinder and has frequently run for periods of two or three months with an average daily deviation of only fifteen-thousandths of a second.

Everyday Woman. About the everyday woman there can be no mistake; she stands outside of all isms and ologies; she thinks of the day as it is, of people as they look, of her surroundings as they are; the great aim of her life s to live through every dow with all the quiet, comfort, and the dignity

New Government Menopoly. Germany's government has decided to monopolize the manufacture of brandy throughout the empire. It guarantee the manufacturers market prices for their spirit, but the price of brandy to consumers will be raised. The net profit to the govern ment will, it is estimated, be about $17,500,000 in the first year.

Pension for Mothers.

The pensioning of mothers by the the unhesitating reply. state is advocated by a University of Chicago lecturer. The professor thinks the pension should increase in amoun up to the third child, and then de crease until the advent of the sixth, when it should cease. This seems to be a sort of compromise between antirace suicide and socialism.

Secret of Happiness. Keep time to our best faith and dot the day with deeds which love and kindness prompt. Be just in your dealings, and keep from stain of sin in thought and word, and you shall wear the crown of an approving conscience and know the secret of the happy life .- t. Mench Chambers,

"Two Story" Bed Appears.

Among the new inventions for flats, where room is at a premium, are the two and three-story beds or cots of enameled iron. They certainly have the advantage of being room savers, whatever their defects from the standpoint of beauty may be. In width they are about the size of ordinary single beds. Each is furnished with woven wire spring, mattress and pillow.

Strange Disease. Two middle-aged women on a car were discussing the sickness of two children of one of them. "And what does the doctor say alls them?" asked one. "The little child has some sort of a fever," was the answer, "and he said that the disease of the other was epidemic." "It's a sickness I never heard of," responded mother number
